

One Spring morning, a young, sweet girl named Lily was taking a gentle stroll in a bamboo forest. Although Lily loved to draw, she was so poor to buy a paintbrush so she used a thick stick instead. During her walk, she spotted a silver fish that was stuck in a cage, she helped release it and then continued her walk. The next morning, she woke with a start. Surprisingly, out of the corner of her eye, she saw a brush on her bedside table which reminded her of her dream with the angel like figure who told her to use it to help the poor. After she found her brush, Lily bumped into a small girl who was struggling to carry her toys to sell so she drew her lots of customers who gave her money.

Suddenly, out of nowhere, the selfish, rich mayor arrived and demanded Lily to draw a field full of money. Feeling upset, Lily granted the mayor's wish but with a twist. Quickly, she drew a field of money at the top of a ginormous mountain. Angri-ly the mayor ordered her to draw a horse to get to the top but then he wanted stronger and stronger winds to help the horse move faster. Lily did what she was told, without noticing the wind had grown so strong, a hurricane appeared, twirling and whirling across the path. Eventually, the mayor fell off and Lily drew a fierce dragon to rush back to the village.