

Golden, glistening sun shines on my blue neck. I couldn't help but be petrified about the mythological creature. It felt like I was dreaming. Supernatural levitating mountains scratched the rear as the helicopter. Hovering down, I leaped onto the vine as wide as a house. The forest looked like an endless labyrinth of towering trees - an endless green blanket steeped in the shadow. Clouds looking as gummy as candy glass.

Splash, splash, splash, crystal clear water bubbled like a fizzy drink. Floating gracefully, lightly balanced on the surface, waterlilies danced across the water while blue glowing fish diving into the water. Using my balance, I carefully walked on the log above the streaming hot water. Unexpectedly, I fell in the streaming liquid. My skin turned smooth and clean. I stepped out of the pond and continued exploring.

After a few hours exploring Pandora, I stepped into a tunnel. It felt like I was the only person on Pandora. I stepped in an isolated cave which was cold. Usually, it's very hot. It felt like someone me like a Nair. I ignored it and continued exploring. It looked like an isolated cave.