

Is technology destroying the human race?

Throughout the human race, technology has significantly evolved over the past few generations of humanity. This innovation, filled with many surprising capabilities and features, helping individuals with their intelligence is capable of anything you can think of, from lightbulbs to walking robots. With its impressive abilities, technology can be useful, however it's growing unexpectably smarter than mankind. It is now important that it is time to discuss the vital risks whilst using the full potential of technology.

What are the benefits of using technology?

Technology features a significant amount of capabilities such as: being able to communicate, like how during Covid-19, technology is useful to call and text family and friends. Additionally, the media is able to let you research helpful information, transcending with humans' perceptiveness. In fact, technology has an ability of also being able to enhance your education, from digital applications improving your academic performance.